

THE LEAD QUESTION

The Anticipated Ruling of Secretary Windom Satisfactory.

IT WILL SHUT OUT FOREIGN LEAD.

Except Upon Payment of Duty—The Real Estate Transfers—The Sugar Family—Brief Business Bits.

THE SUNDAY HERALD published an Associated Press dispatch to the effect that Secretary Windom has determined to settle soon all the important tariff questions which have been raised during his incumbency. One of the principal questions, of course, is the one in which this territory, or at least the mine owners and smelters, are deeply interested in. We refer to the classification of foreign lead ores, containing silver. Secretary Windom, it is said, has received reports of special agents sent to the Mexican border for the purpose of investigating the subject of the importation of lead ores from Mexico, and has learned that gross and extensive frauds have been practiced, and the payment of duties on this commodity have been systematically evaded. These reports, all of which are doubtless true, will have great weight in the settlement of the question at issue, and it is believed at the department that the dutiable value of imported ores containing lead and silver will be heavier than determined by the relative weight of the two metals, instead of by their relative value, as under the present practice.

Mr. Hauser when seen yesterday by a Herald reporter, said such a ruling could have but one effect, and that would be to make the Mexican silver-lead ores now and for some time past being smuggled into this country lead ores, as it was almost impossible that any of the products from Mexican mines could show a greater weight in silver than in lead to the ton. "It is a great weight," he said, "that the Mexican lead ore smuggled into this country must pay a duty if it comes here at all. There is, of course, reason to believe that the ruling, if made as indicated in the Herald's dispatch, will be appealed to the supreme court. If it is appealed, and the ruling reversed, the only action left open would be in having a bill passed by Congress, and this would settle the matter beyond any doubt. I question very much, however, if the supreme court would take any action in the matter looking to a reversal of the ruling."

The prospect of a speedy ruling, and of the action indicated in the dispatch, has created a very favorable feeling among the mine owners and smelters operating in Salt Lake.

The Territorial Reform School.

Proposals to furnish building hardware for the Territorial Reform school appear in another issue. The proposals must be in writing, with a sample of goods agreed to be furnished by the bidder, and must be at the office of the superintendent of construction in Ogden by 10 o'clock tomorrow at which time and place they will be considered by the trustees. The time allowed is much too short, but some of our dealers may be able to get them if they feel so disposed.

The Sugar Family.

The sugar family is by no means abated, the scarcity continuing among all our dealers. Quotations yesterday, $19.25.

The Culmer Building.

The erection of what appears to be a solid wood front to the Culmer building on First South street has called forth much comment, and many are the complaints that have poured into THE HERALD office.

As we have not a copy of the building ordinance at hand, it cannot be printed this morning, but the following explanation from Culmer Bros. will shed some light on the matter:

SALT LAKE CITY, June 24, 1889.

EDITHS HERALD:—Most likely the item in Sunday's Tribune about a large business building which was called forth by the iron front, referred to the block which we are putting up on First South street. It is not the first time we have been misunderstood, but some of the remarks have been obviously malicious, while others have arisen from ignorance of the final character of the structure.

Up to the time when Inspector Brounby met with his unfortunate accident we had taken pains to have him see and sanction every detail of the construction, and we were entirely satisfied and according to law. We were particularly so to this because we had dared to erect this building without the aid of any other architect than one of our own best men, Mr. Alfred E. Culmer, who, however, is so thoroughly good a builder that we had no other need. But we have had several words of what would be said whether we built well or ill, and if the Tribune's assertion basely truth that the "parties building adjoining in a most unbecoming manner" of fun of it.

If the critics will kindly await the completion of this job, rather than condemn what they do not understand, we shall be able to show them a strong, well-constructed, handsome building as nearly fire-proof as any in the city. Let them remember that we are building it with our own sweat and blood, and we have the assurance that there is no one that has considered, half so deeply as we, what would be the best backing for the iron front; and on this point we have consulted the best authorities and have the fullest advice. The cost has not been considered in choosing the wood backing. A prominent architect estimated that it would cost $1,000 less to back with brick. But all first-class authorities place wood, when thus covered with iron, as the first choice of material for the resistance of fire. Insurance men should be good judges. The underwriters for the Pacific coast will not accept heavy cast-iron doors as fire-proof, but insist upon strong wood doors covered with galvanized iron. The same thing applies to front construction.

Because one of our side walls has been greatly delayed in building, and we have been passing the erection of the interior partitions of the upper floors, there has been an unusual display of wooden studding, but we can't help that. The rooms in the Scott-Auerbach building and other large structures are made of exactly the same material, but the passer-by did not have so good a view.

There is no wholly fire-proof building in the whole west; but we feel that we shall have a very close approach to it, and shall take great care to provide against fire, as we are not forgetting that we should be the greatest sufferers in such an event. There will be no stoves nor grates. The building will be heated by steam and lit by incandescent electric light. There will be an automatic fire alarm and water in each room, water and hose in the hall-ways, ample stairways, a steam elevator and commodious fire escapes and stand pipes on the outside. After straining so fully for such an emergency, it seems rather severe to be called to account. As to strength, we can scarcely conceive of a failure of the strain it will bear being put on any part of the building.

You must forgive us for taking up paper in our own defense, but we would like, once more, to state to the public that we have no claim regarding our building. We feel a pleasure in carrying on the work and supporting our contribution towards the building up of the town would be cheered with pleasure by others, as we believe it is by all except a few who have so little to do of their own work that they spend much time in finding fault with the labors of others.

COAL LAND DEVISION. A rather important decision was made in the local land office yesterday. It was in the case of the application of Charles H. Moore, representing the Swan combination, to purchase the coal land and on which Captain R. H. Middlemiss had filed. The land office ruled against the claim of Mr. Moore, whereupon the attorneys for Captain Middlemiss filed an application to purchase on his behalf. The claim is said to be very valuable, being the key to the finest coal and yet discovered in Utah. The captain has done much to develop the coal lands in this territory, and his friends will rejoice with him in his present triumph.

MRS. EVANS' FUNERAL. The funeral services over the remains of the late Anne Evans, nee Evans, who died at the Twelfth ward assembly rooms on Sunday, and were numerous attending, many friends of the family nearly filling the hall. Bishop's Councilman John Drake presided. When the choir sang "The Resurrection Day," Sunday School Superintendent T. V. Williams offered prayer and "Nearer My God to Thee," had been sung. Bishop O. W. Younger, who delivered a most impressive address. It was a remarkable effort, and was commented upon by those not of the prevailing faith as being a masterpiece of eloquence. He addressed himself to the congregation as "brethren and sisters of humanity," and by elegant selections of phrases and plain reasoning, explained the difference between those of his faith and those of other faiths and those of no faith at all. He forcefully spoke of the sterling worth of the deceased, her steadfastness in the faith she espoused in 1857, and her many virtues, the greatest of which was charity. The bishop spoke words of comfort and consolation to the relatives and exhorted all to be cheerful. He said that the deceased was a few better words, testified to the worth and goodness of the deceased and gave cheering sentences to those who mourned. The choir sang "There is Sweet Rest in Heaven," and the service was not less than a procession of convocations containing relatives and friends followed the remains to the cemetery, where at the grave, Elder T. V. Williams offered the dedicatory prayer.

A PAINFUL EXPERIENCE.

Elongated Whackster's First Fatal Round with a Buzz Saw.

The new moon was making a feeble and ineffectual attempt to pierce the dense cloud that overhung the land. It was in the beautiful but billous spring time. May—emiling May—had taken another fit of the sulks. Old winter was in her lap again, and she weeping, scolding, tearing her hair, and howling like a lonely cat sitting on a backyard fence and endeavoring to give the neighbors some idea of the emotions that rack the soul in the first keen agony of disappointed love. The winds moaned dimly, the rain was still breaking the record in its six days' blow-aw-please falling match, and the country's visible supply of contented men consisted solely of umbrellas dealers and American imitations of Englishmen walking serenely about with their trousers rolled up.

Three separate and distinct times had Glycine McCurdy looked at the clock. Three times had she executed a yawn so frank, so simple, so unrestricted in its architectural plan and front elevation that it could not have been distinguished from the involuntary Debatante gesture with which the patient reader of a London daily paper turns to the editorial page. Three times had she remarked that the storm outside seemed to be subsiding, but would probably break out again worse than ever and continue all night.

But Elongated Whackster still lingered. Elongated knew it was late, but he had something to say, and he meant to say it if he had to stay till he heard the sound of the early coffee mill in the distant kitchen. All he was waiting for was an encouraging opportunity. It seemed to have come at last. "There wouldn't have been anything premature about it if it had been fired out of here three hours ago. Look at that clock, you stork-legged, stork-dumped giraffe! You clothing store tummy! Giff!"

And Elongated Whackster got. While the wind sobbed, and the clouds wept, and all nature lifted up her voice and groaned, Elongated Whackster took his hat and went forth into the gloom of the darkness of the night—Chicago Tribune.
